

Keokee Publishing utilized 7 of my images throughout the interior of this Lake Pend Oreille guidebook. I did not have any images make it to the color section. I totally agree with their selections, as submitting for this book made me keenly aware of an area I need to improve my coverage of.

Launch party celebrates new Lake Pend Oreille book Book filled with recreationists' facts, historical lore, illustrations

SANDPOINT, Idaho—It's a book as big and grand as Lake Pend Oreille itself. The much-anticipated "Legendary Lake Pend Oreille: Idaho's Wilderness of Water" is finally here.

Rich with sketches about biology and botany, loaded with fascinating historical lore, and abundantly illustrated, "Legendary Lake Pend Oreille" captures the lake's incredible features. Included are comprehensive guides to all the lake's public recreation; paddle routes for kayakers and canoeists; resources and advice for boaters and sailors; and chapters devoted to the lake's 30-plus hiking trails and its fish and fisheries. In addition, the 450-page book includes a 16-page Ross Hall black-and-white photo section, 16 color plates, and a foldout color map by Terrapen Geographics with panoramic photos by Jay Mock. On the cover is an original watercolor by Karen Robinson. Inside are pen-and-ink illustrations by Robinson, as well as paintings by Eileen Klatt and Ward Tollbom.

Written by longtime resident and avid outdoor recreationist Jane Fritz, the book includes a special foreword by the late Hazel Hall and an introduction by Francis Cullooyah of the Kalispel Tribe of Indians. Kevin Davis, Gary Hassler, Cate Huisman, Marianne Love, Heather McElwain, Patrick McManus, Jim Mellen and the late Dennis Nicholls also wrote selections in the book.

Published by Keokee Books of Sandpoint, "Legendary Lake Pend Oreille" sells for $24 and will be available at local bookstores and select retailers beginning Nov. 27. To learn more about the book or the launch event, look up www.KeokeeBooks.com.
